

mounted by every session of the account — across testbeds

Two rules. Sessions churn, so nothing survives in a pod: the platform mounts its own volume over /workspace, and anything the image wrote there is hidden. And authored state never mixes with discovered state — a pod's address changes every session, so addresses live in settings/ records that expire with their node, never in the wiring.